

The Model for Dementia Palliative Care Project

Dementia is a life-limiting illness and is a leading cause of disability and death in the UK and Ireland

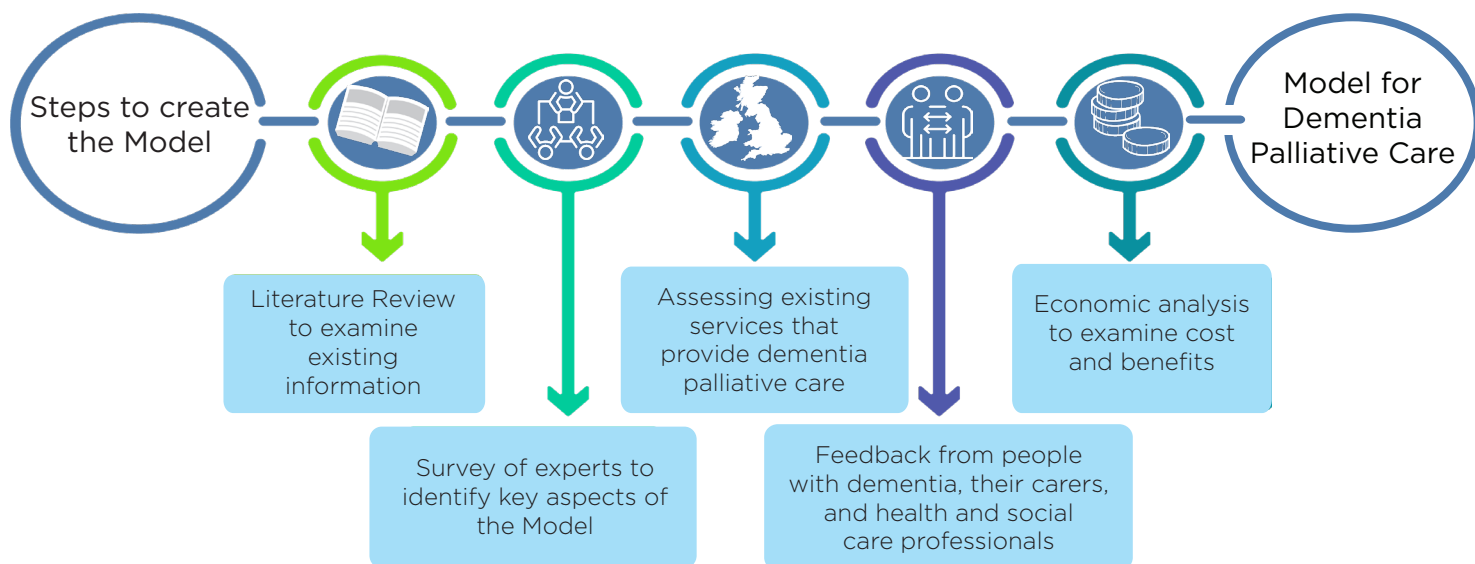

Palliative care is an approach which helps people with life limiting illness, like dementia, live well until death

A team of experts is working on the Model for Dementia Palliative Care Project to identify what services people with dementia might need and how these should be delivered

Our aim is to help people with dementia to stay living at home in their community while receiving excellent palliative care services. We will meet our aim by developing a Model (a plan) to support services to do this.

We are busy developing the Model, which we will share in the coming months!
